

Corporate Governance

The Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 imposed significant corporate governance requirements on public companies and obligates boards of director to corporate executives, and the board members themselves, are complying with these responsibilities. We have been guiding public companies in their corporate governance responsibilities for over 30 years and have worked with our clients to develop workable corporate governance principles and charters. We attend all board and committee meetings of our clients and guide them in the proper discharge of their corporate and fiduciary responsibilities.

Becker attorneys perform independent counsel investigations for a wide array of corporate issues including whistleblower complaints, employee discrimination and harassment claims and worksite disputes. We provide confidential advice to our clients and help resolve claims cost effectively.
